Sorry for the delayed response, spent all afternoon in meetings planning for the public utilities commission meeting on Monday. Expecting protesters/disruptions because it's another hurdle for the line 3 project.

Subject: PUC Hearing

Good Afternoon-

The Public Utilities Commission meeting wrapped up just before noon. MRT and SRT debriefed and departed around 1230.

We had one minor disruption after the commission voted to not reconsider its earlier approval of permits for line 3. A handful of people stood up in sequence reading prepared statements. Before we needed to intervene they stopped and exited the room on their own.

After the vote to reconsider a large number of anti-line 3 people left the hearing and overflow room. They eventually migrated over to the governor-elect's transition office in the capitol and stayed there for a short time before leaving. We deployed one platoon of MRT to the capitol and staged them in the Cass Gilbert Library as a precaution.

After the hearing I met with PUC commissioners, they were incredibly appreciative of our efforts to provide a safe environment for the meeting, as was the senate staff.

Thank you for approving MRT and SRT for this event. I believe the number of troopers present played a significant role in keeping everything calm.

Let me know if you have any questions,

Eric
